FREDRICK REDD, Baritone

Fredrick Redd, a seasoned singer, actor, and industry professional whose talents have illuminated stages across the US and beyond has garnered acclaim from prestigious publications like London's Opera Now, Opera News, and the illustrious New York Times.

With a repertoire boasting over 300 shows in the vibrant landscape of New York City, Fredrick has graced Carnegie Hall's iconic main stage on seven triumphant occasions captivating audiences since his debut there as the baritone soloist in Orff's "Carmina Burana". His magnetic presence extends to the Metropolitan Opera Guild, where he enraptured listeners with excerpts from the timeless "Rigoletto" and his debut in the Emmy-nominated production of "Porgy & Bess" at the New York City Opera at Lincoln Center where he recently returned as a featured artist in the world premiere of "Stonewall". In the heart of Fredrick's operatic repertoire (20 lead roles), he shines in the masterpieces of Verdi and Puccini, portraying iconic roles like Amonasro in "Aida" and Scarpia in "Tosca" with committed depth and emotion. Recent debuts include Hark in the opera "Nat Turner" with the NJ Symphony and his portrayal of Wotan in Wagner's "Das Rheingold" and a celebrated artist at the 45th William Warfield Scholarship Fund Benefit Concert.

In his Off-Broadway theatre performances, Fredrick embodies compelling characters like the formidable "Emperor Jones" and the enigmatic Dom Frolo in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." His versatility as an artist includes appearances in national television commercials for the US Open in addition to his performances on stage and screen.

Fredrick's influence extends beyond the stage enriching the next generation of artists, through vocal master classes, and serving as a board member for five esteemed arts organizations. He maintains memberships in AGMA, Actor's Equity (AEA), and eligibility for SAG/AFTRA. Balancing a thriving artistic and business career with a passion for athletics, Fredrick's engineering, and MBA background position him as a sought-after consultant. As a 2-time Ironman and 4-time marathon finisher, he embodies resilience and determination in all aspects of his life.
